

MURPHY RIDICULES THE CONSTITUTION

Points Out That Radical Features Have Proved Injurious to Arizona

PHOENIX, April 1.—President F. M. Murphy of the Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix railway arrived in the city yesterday. This was the first visit of Mr. Murphy to Phoenix for considerably more than a year. He went to New York more than fifteen months ago and remained to attend the board meetings of the various companies in which he is interested and was further detained there by other developments.

He will remain in the territory for about six weeks and will then go east again for a short time. Mr. Murphy and his party left last night for Silverbell. He will visit Tombstone and make a trip along the Gila, returning to Phoenix in about ten days.

Several things have happened in Arizona since Mr. Murphy was last here. One of them is the proposed constitution concerning which Mr. Murphy had something to say. He do not hesitate to say, remarked Mr. Murphy, "that if the people of Arizona had adopted a conservative constitution as the East had expected they would, millions of dollars would have poured into the new state for investment in various enterprises. Millions would have come into the Salt River valley. Conditions throughout this country just now are not such as to encourage investment. The men who have money are preserving a waiting attitude and it will be some time before they will become reconciled to the new conditions. Meanwhile a great deal of money is going out of the country, to Russia, China and other foreign countries—money whose owners would have preferred it invested at home."

The record of Arizona for conservatism was in its favor. It was generally believed that this record would be maintained in the formation of a constitution and on account of the opportunities for investment and developments here, capitalists were eagerly looking forward.

"If the spirit of the people had found expression in such a constitution as had been expected, the men with capital would have said: There is a place where we can go with our money."

"An things stand, the people of the territory can regard themselves as fortunate in having such a president as Mr. Taft, who will protect them from the results of the work of the constitutional convention. The president will not approve the constitution had procured railroad transportation as it has been adopted. His objection to the provision of the recall of the judiciary is deep seated and real. The president might waive his objections to the initiative and referendum notwithstanding his well-known opposition to them. He will probably assume that he has done all that he can do to put us on the right track. He came to the territory in a friendly spirit and advised the people and left no doubt that he sincerely desired the admission of Arizona. He will probably conclude that if the people reject his advice, they must take the consequences. His mind is unalterably made up respecting the recall."

I think that the efforts now being made by the friends of the constitution to push it through as it stands, are ill advised; they are doomed to failure and they are really making a bad matter worse by advertising to the men whose help they need, that we have made a mistake and are persisting in it."

Speaking of general business conditions, Mr. Murphy said: "For various reasons capital is in a waiting disposition. Important cases now pending in the supreme court have much to do with the prevailing uncertainty. Men who are hoping that in some way there will come a suggestion to make it possible for people to make definite plans for a period long enough to get results."

"Personally, I think there is unwillingness on the part of those who are in control of big affairs to accept the new conditions which I believe they must recognize to some extent sooner or later and adjust themselves to them."

"In fact, the trouble is not so much that the conditions are unfavorable as that they are new and uncertain, upon which plans for the future cannot be laid. I think that if any general policy could be relied upon for any length of time, there would quickly be a good deal of business, for otherwise the country is in good shape. But when capitalists of industry are devoting all their strength and energy to putting their affairs in order to withstand the effect of unsettled conditions we can't expect much new work to be undertaken. When an army is engaged in building breast works it is not making progress in the direction of an advance. But I believe that after a little while things will be straightened out."

He hoped that the plans of the El Paso & Southwestern for an extension of its line to Phoenix would be carried out for he said that that would give the Port Lobos line access to this valley.

"MIKE THE TAILOR" HAS BEEN GOING STEADILY AHEAD

From a small beginning to a first class emporium wherein the laboring man or man of fashion can be fitted out completely from head to toe with the best make of working clothing or of "dressy" up-to-date wearing apparel—This tells the story of the success of M. Rosenthal, better known as "Mike the Tailor."

Mr. Rosenthal came to this district five years ago and opened a small establishment on Junction avenue, Lowell, in which he conducted a business in clothing, miners' supplies and like articles. Gradually as time went by and his strict integrity in business dealings became known, his scope of trade enlarged and, as his customers increased, their demand caused the enlargement of his business as well as his clerical force.

Realizing that the time had come for him to make a move, as the old store room was too small to accommodate his rapidly increasing trade and his enormous stock of goods, Mr. Rosenthal erected a new and modern building on Main street, Lowell. He has just got settled in his new quarters.

No more attractive store offers his good and the cheerful attention of its clerical force in the entire district, than that of "Uncle Mike." Not alone has he built his trade up to enviable proportions, but through unflinching courtesy, anxiety to please every customer and above all by the sterling merit of the lines of goods he carries, he has made it a pleasure for anyone to enter his store, whether they come with the intention of purchasing or not.

Tastefully arranged in show cases and shelves and counters are huge piles of the best lines obtainable in haberdashery, clothing, shoes, etc.

The names of the manufacturers whose goods are displayed speak better of the high class stock than could anything else. The Royal Tailors and the Continental Tailoring company, two of the best custom made clothing houses in the business are on his list. Both are located in Chicago. A practical guarantee among the lovers of good clothing is his own ability "let Uncle Mike take your measure for a suit and cloth, workmanship and fit that go to make a satisfied customer will be yours." His successes are so many, his failures so few that the old catch phrase, "once a customer, always a customer," has particular application here.

His lines of haberdashery are equally high class. The latest shades in shirtings and the very latest wrinkle in colors and ties are to be found upon his shelves. An inspection by a prospective customer is all that is needed to produce the desired sale.

A special feature of the establishment is its shoe department in which anything from the heavy working shoe or boot to the light soled dancing pump is to be found. No better article of footwear than the product offered by Mike, the Tailor or dress can be found anywhere.

Entirely separate from the rest of the store is the hardware department which Mr. Rosenthal has decided to maintain, it having proved such a factor in his past success. The same meritorious lines of hardware with the best dinner buckets, and stickies, etc., to be found in the district are on his shelves.

"Mike the Tailor invites his old customers to call upon him as well as the public at large. He is sure to make friends who will be glad to witness the success which his tasty new establishment deserves and undoubtedly will meet with."

AVERTS AWFUL TRAGEDY.

Timely advice given Mrs. C. Wil longhby, of Marengo, Wis., (R. No. 1) prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. Doctors had said her frightful cough was a "consumption" cough and could do little to help her. After many remedies failed, her aunt urged her to take Dr. King's New Discovery. "I have been using it for some time," she wrote and the awful cough has almost gone. It also saved by little boy when taken with a severe bronchial trouble. "This matchless medicine has no equal for throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists."

Dorothy Russell, the daughter of Lilian Russell, is soon to become a dramatic star. She is now Mrs. Dunsen, the wife of an owner of gold mines in Peru.

Margaret Hington, who has closed her season, is reading manuscripts to find a new play.

"Our baby cries for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. T. B. Kendrick, Rasava, Ga. "It is the best cough remedy on the market for coughs, colds and croup." For sale by all Dealers.

Quiet Effects Mark the Juvenile Fashions this Spring

SPRING STYLES for boys consist of neat, quiet effects, in plain and novelty fabrics in grays, browns and blues. Black and white check effects are being shown with such profusion that they must insinuate themselves upon the favor of discriminating mothers, as they are really very attractive and refined.

Of the styles prescribed for boys this spring the Norfolk coat suit with knickerbocker pants is still in the lead. Brown, navy and cadet blues are the predominant color novelties, while grays are still as popular as they were last spring. Herringbone stripes and invisible crossbar and overplaid effects manifest themselves in a manner that must command response. In reference to young men's styles it is evident that the correct length of the coat is to be from 32 1/4 to 34 inches, which indicates that the shorter style of coat favored for men has not, as yet, arrived in the junior fashions. Both the single and double-breasted styles are making a strong bid for predominance, but during the early weeks of trading there is no indication as to which style will prove the most popular, as both have been received with high favor.

The necks are of manish type, long and comparatively narrow. For the little fellows the sailor blouse is proving exceptionally popular. Eton shapes will also be strong favorites, and Norfolk have many staunch adherents. An Eton style suit with white will be quite popular for boys from three to ten years of age. Wash suits are shown chiefly in novelty conceptions of the sailor and Russian blouse styles. One sailor blouse style that is attracting considerable attention is trimmed on the collar with black narrow braid and an edging of white silk cord. Worsted materials are going to be more popular in all juvenile garments than they have been for several seasons. In the higher priced garments cassimere, chevrons, tweeds and homespuns are shown in exquisite pattern and color effects.

There is not much of note to be chronicled in the furnishing fashions. The little fellows will wear large straw hats of inverted saucer shape, and the school boys still stick to the soft telescope shapes with the brims turned down on one side and up on the other. Fancy bands of blue, gray and red shades will be very fashionable this season. Two styles of shoes are receiving special attention for boys this season with equal popularity. These are the patent pumps for dress wear and the tan button oxfords for school and recreation wear. In ties, the narrow four-in-hand in Scotch plaids and Roman stripes are especially noticeable and polka-dot and plaid Windsor conventional figures.
